InCommon Advance CAMP: Identity Services Summit III

May 25-27, 2011 in Westminster, Colorado

The Westin Westminster Hotel

Want solutions for better provisioning, discovery, authorization or other identity-related problems? Do you develop software or support open/community source applications? Interested in working with identity leaders across higher education and getting in on the ground floor to help design the next generation architecture? Come to the inCommon Advance CAMP: Identity Services Summit III and participate!

It's Your Meeting

Led by you, the attendees, the Advance CAMP's unconference format provides the flexibility to take the meeting where you want it to go. Pitch your challenges and possible solutions to your colleagues and work together to determine the breakout sessions and set the agenda. At the end, identify the common most pressing needs and volunteer for project teams to move the issues forward.

Past Identity Services Summits have yielded discussions and solutions for developer practices in federating applications and federated group management as well as investigating SPML and provisioning to the cloud. Eighteen projects were identified last year and fifteen were either completed, are still ongoing, or were adopted by organizations like Jasig as a more formal project.

You can review the outcomes of the 2010 meeting for a complete summary of the progress made since the the last Advance CAMP in June.

- Develop your take-aways for using technologies such as Facebook, OAuth, OpenID, SAML, Kuali KIM, OpenSocial, Spring, and Django among others
- Participate in developing the next generation identity services landscape

Tell us ahead of time what you're interested in and get your colleagues thinking too. Post your ideas to the topic ideas page.
